Director's Message

Who is the Clemson MRED Program? I was recently asked this question and while it was intended to be an inquiry about the current make-up of the students, I later thought it deserved a much deeper answer than was probably given.

It is the former USAF Captain who only a few months ago was monitoring North Korean missile launches. It is the first-generation college graduates making their families proud by attending one of the best graduate real estate programs in the country. It is the students from large metropolitan areas who graduated from prestigious private universities and are now in study groups learning from students who grew up in rural towns and worked their way through a public college or university. It is the mothers who balance the rigors of graduate school with the demands of childcare. It is the non-traditional students who are pursuing their second graduate degree or the students making a transition back to school after an extended career. It is the international students successfully making the transition into a very different culture but enthusiastically embracing this very different way of learning. It is the former college athletes who have applied their leadership by creating a teammate culture among the students.

"Who is the MRED Program"? In short, it is a remarkable group of talented individuals with diverse backgrounds, different ethnicities, races and genders but with the same hopes and goals. A group who is learning that responsible real estate development is about enhancing and respecting the character of communities. I am blessed to be teaching them.
Go Tigers!

Winning Practicum

The December MRED Class of 2017 completed their final practicum presentations last November. Each year, the Society of Industrial and Office Realtors (SIOR) Foundation, through the SIOR Carolinas Chapter, awards a scholarship to the winning team. This year, there was a tie between the following groups:

Drayton Mill (TMS Development) by Hemadi Hamam, Kurt Wallenborn, and Daniel Wright

Midtown (CC&T Real Estate Services) by Brunson Miller, Andrew Simmons, and Wes Whitlock

Pacific Box & Crate (Raven Cliff Company) by Andrew Cohen, Stuart Hall, and Craig Gearhart

MRED Spotlight

Tom Fox, Owner, FOX Commercial Properties

This past fall Tom taught Market Analysis to the first year students. To learn more about his experience as a first time educator in the MRED program, his opinion on the retail outlook, and a current deal he is working on, check out the News tab on the MRED Website.
